

HOW IS INTERMITTENCY WIDENING TERRITORIAL FRAGILITY IN THE ADRIATIC CITY ?

Porto
Sant'Elpidio

SPLASH!
FIRST DIP IN THE ADRIATIC
SEA

Porto Recanati

Porto Potenza
Picena

REC
Civitanova
Marche

Ancona

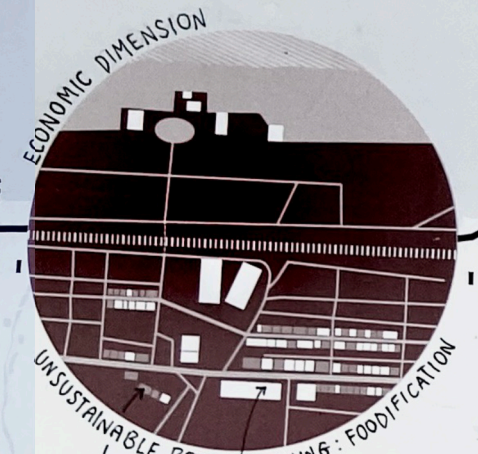

Dear diary, my name is Massimiliano Colombi, I work as a water technician in the Marche and Abruzzo regions. I am truly passionate about urban planning and through my travels I have noticed the influence of seasonality on the Adriatic city.

Porto Recanati revealed the Adriatic City's shifting character, from an industrial past to a tourism-driven present. Passing the Capannone Ex Montecatini Montedison, a 1960s fertilizer storage, I was struck by a new neighborhood rising nearby—a vivid contrast symbolizing the coastal area's ongoing transformation.

After I started my journey I felt quite overwhelmed by the richness in terms of insights and notable elements: the beach establishments, the residential complexes, the entertainment businesses, but also the quietness of agricultural fields and abandoned or underused spaces...

In Civitanova Marche I met a lifeguard that told me that several retails that had been recently inaugurated in Civitanova have shut down because they could not sustain their costs and their commercial activity. This is apparently leading to a remarkable commercial turnover.

OTHER COMMERCIAL ACTIVITIES

FOOD-RELATED
COMMERCIAL ACTIVITY

In Porto Sant'Elpidio's central street, I was surprised by the variety of food shops, from sushi to poke, while hoping for traditional seafood.
Spotting a boutique selling local products, I entered and chatted with the owner about his life and work in the town...

Lido
Tre A

I found designed but when residents housing communi
The Scuol model of become r

lo rchi
ISLE ATION

a neighborhood originally
'for summer apartments, that plan failed, permanent moved in due to lower prices. However, a strong ty identity is still lacking. la Popolare in Tre Archi is a resilience, helping the area more self-sustained.

Pedaso
Cous
Cous

While passing through Pedaso, I felt the difference between steady and intermittent districts. There was a separated neighborhood only with residential buildings where I noticed strong sense of community.

Grottammare
Out-money

As I have visited Grottammare in winter and summer, I noticed the difference in use of spaces.
During warm seasons more people were staying in the hotels along Lungomare and open dehors were crowded while in winter everything was closed and I found a place to stay farther from the coast.

I felt overwhelmed by the spatiality of beach concessions that left so little space for and the touristic residential speculation in San Benedetto. It is impressive to think that San Benedetto keeps growing and expanding, at the expense of neighboring towns...

San Benedetto
del Tronto

Martinsicuro
tranquilla...

The contrast between Martinsicuro and San Benedetto was striking. Martinsicuro is striving to preserve its unique identity.
Local fishermen shared their history with me, highlighting how small-scale fishing is declining as tourism continues to grow.

walking across vulnerable territories in search of resilience communities

AGRICULTURE
CAMPSITE
TOWN INDUSTRIAL RIVER

Giulianova

TRANSFORMATION
SITE OF A FORMER SUGAR FACTORY

The historic city center (up on the hill, the quite sweaty walk!), a public housing neigh an enormous allotment of a former facto transformed into a residential neighbo quite an intermittent city in terms of land u functions.

adriatic intermittency.

Pescara

Montesilvano

At the end of my journey, I encountered another type of intermittency: the use of second houses in the Via Date residential complex of Montesilvano. There, most second houses were used in summertime by their owners, while during the off-season some apartments were informally rented for prostitution activities.

of tourism: the elite and luxurious one and the mainstream one. This city was really characterized by the presence of several fancy bars and restaurants along its promenade. It really felt very different from all the other cities I crossed before.

SHORT TERM RENTALS

I could notice the profusion of short-term renting options for tourists which strongly affect the rhythm of the city: from what I heard from residents, Pineto appears lifeless in winter, while in the high season it is livelier and more eventful.

HOW ARE THE COMMUNITIES RESPONDING TO TERRITORIAL FRAGILITIES? WILL THEY DISAPPEAR?